Rex waddled up towards where Clifford was, while his brothers were hiding behind a large rock. Rex pretended to be friendly and not scared.

Meanwhile his brothers found the catch of fish in a small pool of water not far from the rock. They had a net and dragged the fish to their family area, where it could not be seen. Rex was still talking and unaware about the haul.

Rex ambled home wondering where his brothers went. He thought that they left him, which made him sad. As he got closer to home, everyone was happy and cheering. Rex was baffled and surprised. His father and mother.
